SUCCESSFUL
IN PLAY SCHOOL
AND CRÈCHE

Children enjoy learning when they can satisfy their own curiosity and natural hunger for information – and that is why project work in kindergarten shows such astoundingly positive results. Good projects develop a child's creative thought processes, and help the child take on responsibility for themselves and others. This step-by-step guide provides valuable advice on how to successfully plan, design, and document project work in kindergarten. Includes forms and worksheets to get you started immediately!

The 'Apple Project' developed from an everyday situation – during lunch, children started discussing why some apples taste sweet and others sour. This initial impulse gave Silke, the group's kindergarten teacher, an idea for a new project: Are all apples the same? The group searches for an answer, but each realization along the way reveals another question ...

This book offers a stimulating kindergarten project, plus a wealth of practical ideas and tips for implementing it (and other projects) successfully. The Apple Project is based on the step-by-step guide Success with project work in kindergarten.

Ugh, a bogey! Things that horrify adults frequently fascinate children. Why do we have bogeys in our noses? Do they have some kind of function? One question leads to another. In this project, children learn how the nose works by activating their creative thought processes and developing their own hypotheses.

The best kindergarten projects happen when children's questions guide the way. The adults, in turn, guide the children as they investigate, research, and learn. The main advantage of project work is that it holistically addresses multiple learning areas.

So gelingt der Tagesablauf in der Krippe

Tipps und Tricks für den Krippenalltag

In the crèche many young children are separated from their parents for the first time. That's why there are two aspects of the daily routine to be considered wisely: Recurring routines and rituals provide children orientation and help them to feel safe and secure. But then children also need space for independent explorations. In our book we show you how to plan and realize a well structured and age-based daily routine that is respecting individual needs and demands.

Working together beats working in parallel or against each other. A healthy and constructive dialog between daycare staff and parents is essential – also for the welfare of the child. What information do parents need? What are the best channels for this information? What methods are available? How can I keep parents informed without hours of printing, copying, cutting out, and sticking together? This book shows how the latest techniques and digital media make working with parents more communicative, efficient, and informative.

Meal situations in crèche

How to detect learning opportunities and accompany meals sensitively

Meals offer children multiple learning opportunities. The daily routine of eating together supports their social development and linguistic skills. For children meals mean a get-together, fine motor skills training, intensive sensual experiences and training sessions for independence. By hints and detailed practical guidance, our book shows you how to turn meals in your crèche to a time for learning. The attached DVD shows examples from a German and Italian crèche. Both implement modern pedagogic principles in their creation of meal situations, but in different ways.

Creating good daycare together

A book about quality for parents and educators

It is a widespread belief among parents that the quality of an educational institution – good or bad – is just something one has to accept. In the worst case, the children are sent elsewhere. Many educators feel the same way, and when the daycare institution does not live up to their expectations, they simply resign and move on. In this book, Antje Bostelmann, Michael Fink, and Gerrit Möllers provide an alternative solution, showing how educators and parents can improve daycare quality together. This book provides numerous practical tips and ideas to help you consistently improve the quality of your daycare centre.

Responsible, communicative, creative

The child in Klax education

Klax education has now existed for 25 years. The child as central focus of the educational process, recognition of the child's potential and competencies, and educational tools that allow educators to address the child's needs – these are the foundations of the Klax pedagogy. In these 25 years, Klax educators have thought long and hard about how children and young adults should grow up to become successful and responsible members of society. In this first part of the series on Klax pedagogy, the authors examine what education and learning mean at Klax and which external influences are required for a successful education?

THE LOTTA PICTURE BOOKS

Small children love to be read something to. They listen to stories concentratively and full of suspense. You will have certainly noticed that small children especially love stories of everyday life. No wonder: What's normal to us is a mystery to small children. They have a lot of questions to everyday life that want to be solved and understood.

With our Lotta-books we don't show fantasy worlds. We detail everyday life events of small children. Our expert knowledge has shown that such books help small children understand their own life, arrange their own experiences and ask important questions on routines.

Crèche studio

Painting, splashing and forming with children under the age of 3

Crèche children love to handle with colours, brushes and painting water – but their doing is obviously not about creating pictures. What is so exciting about colour and clay? Which need of development can children act out with these materials? This book describes how children try to understand the world around them by painting and creating – as in open play forms.

BESTSELLER: ACTIVITY TUBS AND ACTIVITY TRAYS

Activity trays – Experiments and game offerings

40 ideas for learning in crèche and kindergarten

Each activity tray is an invitation to discover, a framed puzzle to solve, and gives an impulse to explore: Even Maria Montessori suggested to give kids activity trays with tools that are interesting to them. This would offer them the possibility to discover and explore things with a focused mind. In our book we give the contemporary answer to this idea: 40 new examples for activity trays which were tested in practice and give kids the possibility to deal with. All the tubs can be arranged with just a little effort.
